

CPD handbook appendix 4.2PPM

Multi-source feedback (procedures in pain medicine) - self assessment form

This form was designed to be used by the pain medicine proceduralist undertaking the multi-source feedback activity (the CPD participant).

Please provide honest self-assessment on the form, by indicating whether you never, sometimes, usually or consistently demonstrating the attributes listed on the left-hand side of the form. If any particular item does not apply to your practice, please mark the "not observed" box.

Please give the completed form to the facilitator.

My name: _____

My role: _____

	Not observed	Never	Sometimes	Usually	Consistently
Patient management: Please tick relevant box
Provide effective clinical assessment and plans
Demonstrate proficient technical/procedural skills
Demonstrate good clinical knowledge and application of procedural standards
Provide clear post-procedural care advice/instructions and ongoing management plans
Work in a calm and considered manner, even in stressful situations
Comments
Communication and teamwork: Please tick relevant box
Communicate effectively with patients and family or carers, including risks and benefits of procedures
Communicate effectively with colleagues and other health professionals
Clearly document assessment and management plans
Provide relevant and clear information to referring doctors and handover for inpatients
Recognise and respect the contribution of other team members

Participate in team aspects of care
Lead the team when circumstances require
Comments
	Not observed	Never	Sometimes	Usually	Consistently
Advocacy and professional attributes: Please tick relevant box
Show respect for patient privacy and dignity
Advocate for management options in the best interests of the patient
Recognise and manage the limits of your experience and expertise
Recognise and manage conflict
Act in an ethical manner
Show cultural awareness and sensitivity
Being punctual and reliable
Being contactable and respond appropriately when needed
Comments
Teaching and learning: Please tick relevant box
Actively increase personal knowledge and skills
Contribute to and facilitate the learning of other team members on appropriate pain management relevant to procedural preparation and care
Being available for advice and help when needed
Comments

It would be helpful to the team if I: